Show Notes:

Bonerama's opening set was the perfect fit to start off the Monkeyball preview and as such the house was all primed for the Green River opener, a somewhat rare and favored cover choice of many. Things really got interesting when Mark Mullins of Bonerama entered from stage right and added welcomed textures and layers to the Cuckoo > Total Evaporation journey. The energy and artistry continued throughout the balance of the first set and then was further built upon in the second set as all of a sudden there were two and then three trombones on the stage. The song selection and playing is solid throughout. (ev)
